

The Footprint

One day two brothers had a fight over if ghosts really existed. One pushed the other on into the fireplace, broke his neck and he fell to the ground dead. Since then the other brother has been having strange experiences which seem threatening. One day he was taking a walk. This was the day the ghost was going to strike. The very moment he came to the sidewalk that lead to his house, a gun shot fired. He ducked, but to his surprise it was fired down below. It shot him in the foot. One day he took another walk and a shot fired. It hit him in the chest and he died. His friend was there and saw the whole thing. He called the funeral place. While he was doing that he saw a white see through person lift itself out of the body and walk into the forest. The figure looked exactly like the body. The person was a lumberjack. When the person who called the funeral home turned around, the body was gone. He went to get a closer look when he saw a bloody footprint. Legend has it you can still hear the boys fighting and the faint sound of somebody chopping wood in the forest.
